The Wisconsin Dells area had its beginnings in tourism more than 160 years ago. The beauty of the Wisconsin River's rare sandstone cliffs drew visitors as early as the mid-1800s.

Today, first-class lodging facilities, man-made attractions, restaurants and shops contribute to the continued success of the area. Wisconsin Dells has grown impressively from the first sightseeing excursions on the Wisconsin River to a year-round travel destination offering more than 100 attractions and nearly 100 restaurants and retail shops.

The area's 140 hotels, featuring more than 8,000 units, offer a variety of accommodation opportunities. Over the past two decades, lodging properties with large indoor waterparks and themed atmospheres and amenities have become entertainment in and of themselves, helping the area earn the title of "The Waterpark Capital of the World!®." The Dells also has 19 campgrounds with approximately 3,200 campsites. In all, Wisconsin Dells can accommodate more than 55,000 visitors per night.
